

EXCERPT

Fulton Lewis, Jr., at 7:00 p.m. over WGMS (Washington) and the MBS Network:

Mr. Lewis discussed the situation in Cuba, and the following was heard, in part:

"Nor are those opposing elements any cure-all for the problems that do exist among the masses in Cuba if they were to get in. Some of the generative power behind the revolution unquestionably is communist-inspired. And despite a puddle-brained United States Ambassador who blows off with statements which give aid and comfort to the rebels, the State Department in Washington is going to take a very dim view of any situation that arises in which the Cuban government falls into the hands -- into any hands that are even partially -- or tainted with communism.

"Maybe the Ambassador doesn't know what's going on -- but the CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY certainly -- The Central Intelligence Agency, the CIA certainly does -- and a communist-tinged Cuba, a stone's throw from our guided missile testing bases in Florida is not helping our national security. At least under Batista, the communists are under, not in, control."